

Pavilion Annual State Survey a Successful One

Appling HealthCare System's 101 bed long-term care facility "The Pavilion", recently went through a complex and rigorous yearly survey, where they were found to have zero deficiencies.

Inspection surveys are unannounced and conducted on-site over a several day period. The inspection team evaluates all aspects of resident care and nursing facility procedures and practices, assessing facility compliance with hundreds of specific state and federal standards. "Of the almost 300 long-term care facilities in Georgia, only 13 have received zero-deficiency surveys from January 1st through June 30th, 2014," explains Melba Webb, Pavilion Administrator. "This exceptional survey is a testament to the dedication and commitment of the Pavilions staff." In 2011 the average number of deficiencies per survey in Georgia was 4.9, so to have no deficiencies is truly an honor. Each member of the Pavilion staff plays an integral role in meeting all 372 state and federal regulations evaluated in the survey. This remarkable achievement exemplifies the commitment of the staff at the Pavilion to provide exceptional nursing care and the best possible quality of life for each resident.
